

Iran-Contra affair dominates Reagan's news conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan conceded Thursday night that his Iranian policy had been an arms-for-hostages arrangement, but said, "I would not go down that same road again."

At his first news conference in four months, Reagan said anew he was unaware until last November of profits from the arms sales had apparently funneled to Contra rebels in Nicaragua. He said he still doesn't know what happened to the money.

At a question and answer session dominated by the Iran-Contra affair, Reagan also said he has never deliberately lied to the public, although he admitted to a misstatement at his last news conference in November.

"I'm not going to tell falsehoods to the American people. I'll leave that to others," he said after being questioned insistently on the subject.

He told one questioner that for some time, "all I knew was what I told you" about the affair.

Reagan said he continues to explore every possible avenue for winning the release of eight American hostages in Lebanon. He added that whenever an American citizen is denied his rights anywhere in the world, "it is the responsibility of this government to restore those rights."

Reagan opened the 39th news conference of his presidency by uttering a "rock solid" pledge to veto any attempt in Congress to raise income tax rates. He called on the House and Senate to adhere to requirements in Gramm-Rudman legislation to make deep new spending cuts.

In another subject, Reagan said he was not going to decide whether to authorize new tests of the anti-missile technology. But the president stated that a 1972 arms control treaty with the Soviet Union does not prohibit such tests, and he cited a Soviet military leader as his authority.

The news conference was his first since Nov. 19, a four-month period of political and personal trial for Reagan.

The Iran-Contra affair has mushroomed into a fledgling scandal in the intervening months, with the president's popularity plummeting in the polls to the lowest level of his presidency. On the personal side, Reagan underwent prostate surgery on Jan. 5, and spent several weeks working on a reduced schedule.

Thus, many Republicans in Congress and some administration officials said in advance that Reagan needed a skillful, polished performance at the news conference to still any doubts about his ability to lead the nation for the next two years.

The president joked with reporters and gave them the back of his hand by turns.

When one raspy-voiced questioner exclaimed that she had caught his laryngitis — which the president faked last week to avoid answering questions — Reagan provoked laughter when he replied, "imitation is the sincerest form of flattery."

But when another reporter asked whether the decision to pursue his Iranian policy was casually made, the president replied, "the only thing I've done casually in the six years since I've been here was hold a press conference."

Despite saying he had not known about the diversion of funds to the Contras, Reagan said he had been aware that private groups were providing assistance to the rebels.

He said he believed they violated no law, and said, "It is absolutely vital that we not back away" from this cause.

At a crowded postscript to his session, Reagan also apparently contradicted his vice president by saying that George Bush had not expressed any opposition to the arms sales.

Bush has said that key figures within the administration knew that he harbored reservations about some aspects of the Iranian policy.

Asked whether disclosure of the affair had complicated efforts to free remaining hostages, the president turned the question around.

"The day that the information leaked it was my understanding that the other two were due to get out in the next few days," he said. "If it hadn't leaked I don't know ... whether we would have gotten more out."

Bush denies Khashoggi link

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George H. W. Bush's spokesman denounced as "false and misleading" Thursday a published report that Saudi financier Adnan Khashoggi sent Bush $1,000 for the Iranian Contras in 1985.

Harry Thomas, Bush's press secretary, released two pages of information to dispute a story in The Washington Times which quoted Khashoggi as saying Bush solicited money for the Contras at a time when the U.S. government was prohibited from doing the rebels.

The vice president never has solicited funds from Mr. Khashoggi or Mr. (Bob) Shaheen to provide assistance to the Nicaraguan resistance," Thomas' statement said. Khashoggi described Shaheen as a top aide.

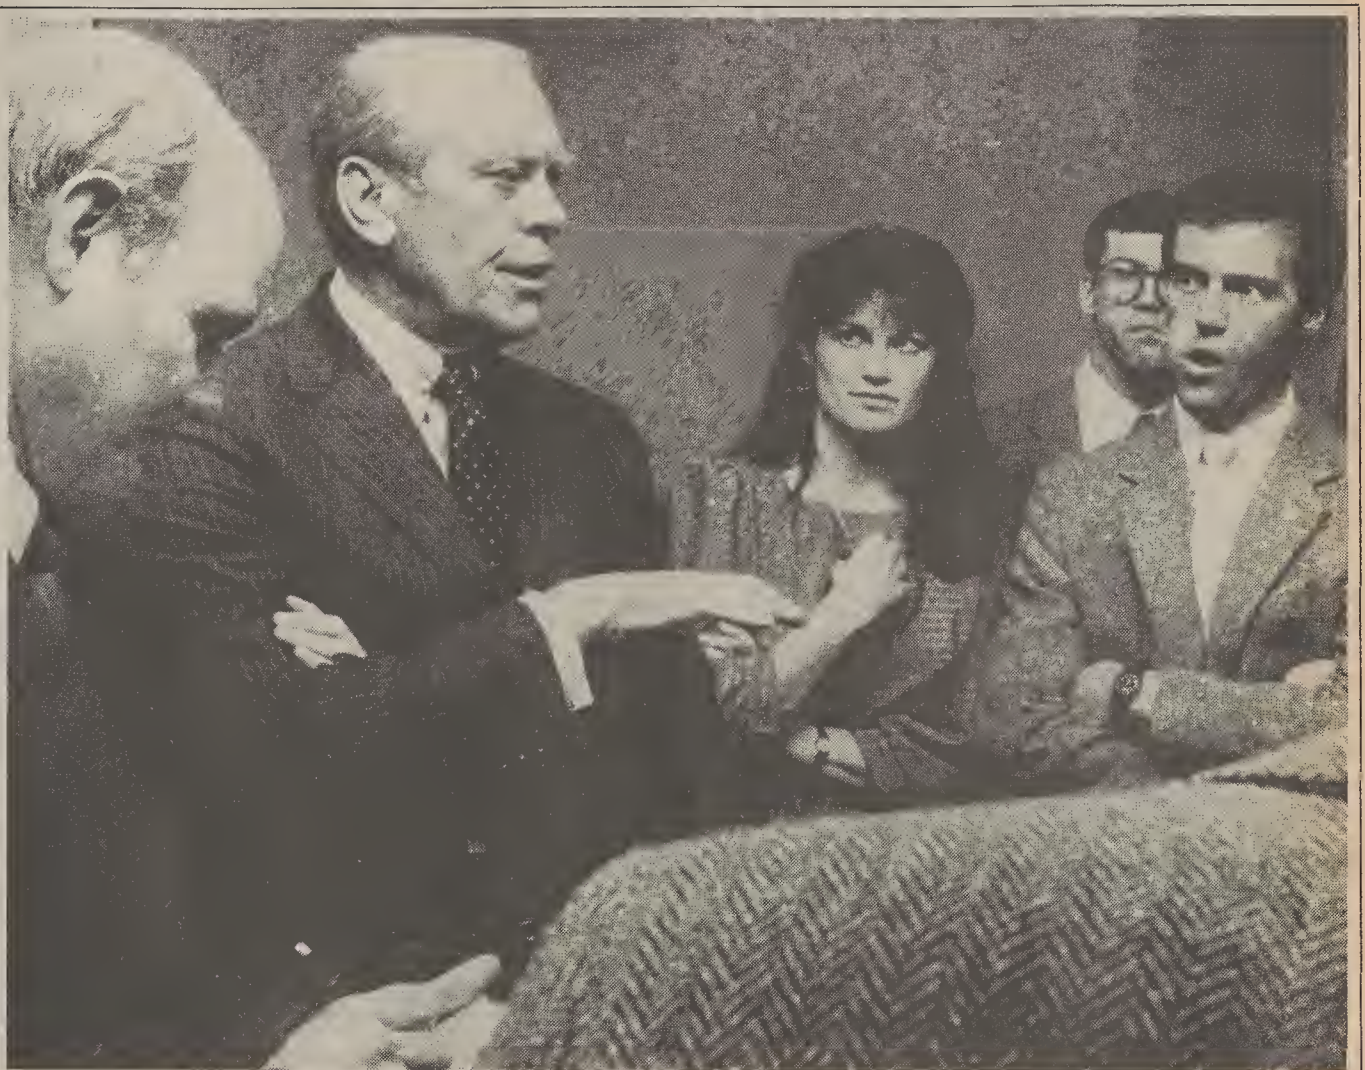

The vice president never has hosted a lunch or meeting of any kind involving Mr. Khashoggi. ...

The vice president never has accepted money from Mr. Khashoggi ... nor has he had any knowledge of Mr. Khashoggi's financial support of the Contra effort," Thomas said.

"Today's Washington Times story is both false and misleading," he said.

A spokesman for the newspaper, Mike Barnhart, said, "The Washington Times stands behind the accuracy of its account of the remarks of Adnan Khashoggi. The account of his remarks was based on the transcript of the interview, as taken from the tape recording and speaks for itself."

Khashoggi, who served as a middleman in the sale of U.S. weapons to Iran, told the newspaper in a weekend interview in Monte Carlo that he was invited to a lunch in 1985 hosted by Bush and aimed at raising money for the Contras fighting Nicaragua's government.

Former U.S. President Gerald R. Ford shook hands, answered questions during a reception in the Wilkinson Center Thursday. An overflow crowd turned out for his speech in the ELWC Ballroom last night.

Ford agrees with Tower report

By RONALD NORVIEL
Universe Staff Writer

Former U. S. president Gerald R. Ford concluded his remarks with a plea for people to "work to eliminate war from our shrinking world and hate from our expanding heart."

Agreeing with the conclusions of the Tower Commission, questioning the congressional changes in presidential power and the fiscal policies of the nation, President Ford spoke to an overflow crowd in the ELWC Ballroom Thursday evening.

Ford said, "I fully agree with the conclusions of the Tower Commission report." He gave three hours of testimony to the commission and they incorporated some of his suggestions in their recommendations.

The National Security Council was originally set up to be a small group of expert analysts to give advice and make the president independent of bureaucrats, said Ford.

"Unfortunately the wrong organization carried out a field operation for which they were not qualified," he said. "It was a high risk job and it wasn't supervised. They couldn't find an honest man to do the job."

Ford agreed with the premise that the nation "should seek contact with those who may survive the Ayatollah."

The changes in White House personnel were good, Ford believes. "Howard Baker will be a good advisor and manager. He has a good rapport with the press and with Congress," Ford said. "They are now on the right track," he said.

Turning the subject to the Constitution Ford said, "The system of checks and balances works pretty well. Once in a while the pendulum swings to a too powerful Congress or to a too strong of a president," Ford said. "We need to be middle of the road between the two extremes."

Ford feels that the 1975 War Powers Act is unconstitutional and impractical. Stressing the impracticality Ford said, "During a crisis all the notification of Congress will be bad for the U.S. The enemy is the benefactor to the War Powers Act." Ford said, "It (the War Powers Act) at least needs modification. I would repeal it if I could."

"Congress has also intruded into presidential power with the Anti-Impoundment Act," said Ford. (The president is not able to impound funds Congress has allocated.) Congress has handled our business so badly that if they were you in business, they would be sent to jail, said Ford.

"I believe in a line item veto, so the president can pass the budget and appropriations bill yet veto individual items he doesn't like," Ford said.

Ford supports SDI program

By RACHEL C. MURDOCK
Senior Reporter

Former President Gerald Ford voiced his support of SDI, but criticized current government ways of dealing with covert military operations at a press conference and meeting Thursday afternoon at the Kennedy Center.

"At this time, I support SDI. I support its research and development," he said. When the project was first announced, Reagan's speech indicated that they would emphasize defense and abandon offense.

"That would be a stupid mistake," Ford said.

Now administration policy does not follow that reasoning, and Ford said he supports the SDI program.

Ford also said he hopes recent intelligence mistakes, such as the bungled Iran affair, will not eliminate covert military operations.

"We've had some very successful operations. I think it would be better if there were a better relation between the White House and Congress on the subject of covert operations."

There are currently too many people on the congressional committees appropriating funds and approving covert operations, and "they can't keep their mouths shut," said Ford. "They're like old ladies at a sewing circle. There needs to be more secrecy in covert operations, or they might just as well be overt," he said.

The Iran affair will not have a long-term effect on the Republican Party, said Ford, and should not be a factor in the 1988 presidential election.

"The issues in 1988 will be the same as they have always been — unemployment, defense — the bread and butter issues. If the economy is healthy, which I believe it will be, the Republicans will have a very good chance in the 1988 election," he said.

What will make the contest interesting will be the large numbers of candidates from both parties and the lack of an incumbent candidate, said Ford. He fielded other questions, including some about Chinese/U.S. relations, dealing with terrorism and the role of congress in security decisions.

Syrians warn 'punishment' if foreign hostages harmed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian forces controlling west Beirut have warned they will mete out "the severest possible punishment" if any of the 25 foreigners believed held hostage by Shiite Moslem extremists are killed, police said today.

"The Syrians have sent messages through Shiite clergymen that they will not sit idly by if a foreign hostage was killed," said a police official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The warning "included a threat of the severest possible punishment if a foreigner was killed," the official said.

Miss Indian pageant resumes after one-year absence from 'Y'

By CLARK HIRSCHI
Universe Staff Writer

Miss Indian U.S.A. will be on campus tonight to crown Miss Indian BYU as part of the Lamanite Week activities. Julie Diane Hill, of Oklahoma, will reign at the Miss Indian BYU pageant today at 8 p.m. in the ELWC East Ballroom and will also conduct a workshop in conjunction with the contest.

The pageant is being resumed following a one-year absence caused by a lack of contestants.

"There was not enough interest," said Edwin Napia, director of the pageant. "Not enough girls were willing to run to make it financially viable."

This year things are back to normal with a well organized pageant and several interested contestants.

Ten BYU contestants

The ten girls competing for the Miss Indian BYU title include: Andrea Abieta, Sylvia Adison, Corinne Avayo, Marettia Begay, Carla Chee, Lynne Lee Hall, Angela Marcel Moore, Theresa "Tracey" Platero, Violet Tso and Lauren Elizabeth Wood.

"There seems to be a more positive attitude on the part of this year's contestants," said Savania Tsosie, coordinator of student programs and one of the pageant directors. "Many of the contestants are running because they see the pageant as an opportunity to better understand themselves and their culture."

Not a "beauty" pageant

The Miss Indian BYU pageant is not like the typical beauty pageant, explained Elaine Cole Heperi, Miss Indian BYU 1984-1985. "The goal is for the girls to feel good about themselves, what they're doing and their heritage."

The pageant was started with the purpose of helping the Indian girls to gain a greater degree of self-confidence and worth, she said.

On Saturday the girls went through five interviews dealing with mass media, culture, Indian affairs-tribal government, traditional clothing, personal and family background and the girl's philosophy about life and school.

Numerous interviews

"I felt really comfortable with the judges and the questions," said Violet Tso, a Navajo from Tuba City, Ariz. She said there was a lot of nervousness before the interviews began, but that everyone felt pretty relaxed once things were under way.

Interviews will account for 50 percent of the final scoring, said Napia.

The girls were also involved in a spontaneous speech contest on Wednesday.

During the contest each girl was read the Lamanite Week theme "With Wings as Eagles," (Isaiah 40:29-31) and asked what she would do to incorporate that theme as a Miss Indian BYU.

"So far I feel really good," said Tracey Platero, a Navajo-Apache from Bloomfield, N.M. "The neatest part for me has been that we are all such great friends." She explained that the girls have been together as a group to practice the various parts of the pageant.

Voting by Lamanite students

Other aspects that will count in the final score include a student vote by the Lamanite students, who can vote in the garden court during the week and the overall pageant on Friday evening.

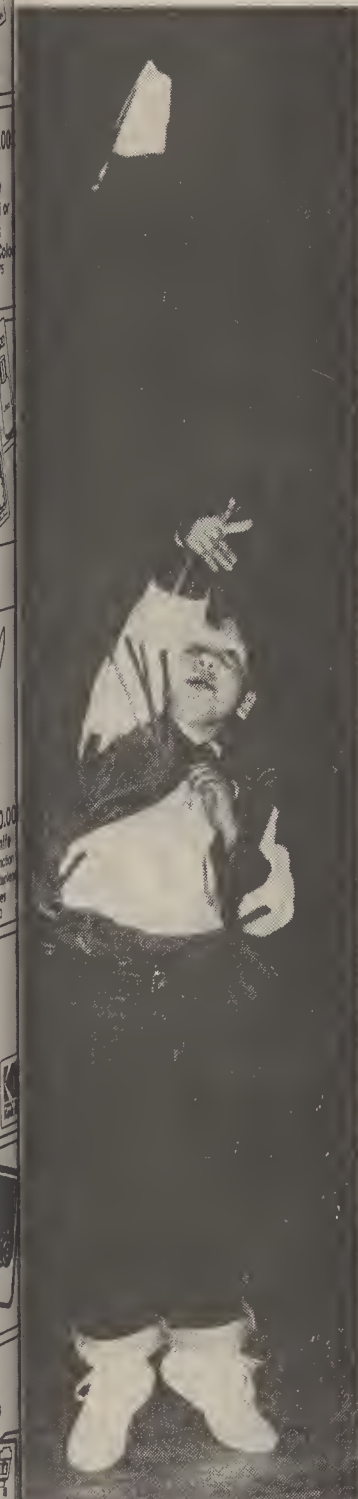

The girls will each appear Friday in their tribal costumes and will also present their individual talents.

"We are trying something new," said Napia. "Instead of having each girl do a traditional and modern talent the girls are being asked to present one talent. The talent should emphasize native American Indian culture."

Some of this year's talents will include Indian sand painting, basket weaving, Navajo pottery making and traditional music and dance. The girls will both demonstrate and explain their skill and the significance of each with regard to their people.

The current Miss Indian U.S.A., Julie Diane Hill, will be on campus tonight to crown the new Miss Indian BYU.

Dealer to plead guilty to fraud charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Boyd L. Jefferies, the foremost among securities dealers in helping takeover artists acquire big blocks of stock, fell victim Thursday to the government's spreading investigation of illegal stock trading. Jefferies announced he would plead guilty to two criminal charges of securities fraud, and that he had resigned from Jefferies & Co., the brokerage firm he founded and built into the leading player in "off market" trading. Neither of the charges involved insider trading, but one involved dealings with Ivan F. Boesky, a former takeover speculator who is at the center of the insider-trading scandal that has shaken Wall Street. "Mr. Boesky was very helpful in developing evidence against Mr. Jefferies," said U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani in Manhattan. No date was set for Jefferies to enter his guilty plea. Each charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison. Jefferies, who also is cooperating with investigators, alluded to the widening scandal in a statement, saying: "Something went wrong in our value systems."

Fifteen other people have been charged or sentenced in the scandal, including some of the biggest names in the financial community. Jefferies had ties to most of the nation's top investors, including Boesky, Carl Icahn of New York and Irwin Jacobs of Minneapolis.

Subcommittee OKs credit rate ceiling

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee, proclaiming a first-round victory for consumers, launched an attempt to impose a federal ceiling on credit card interest rates. The ceiling would be set at eight percentage points above the yield on one-year Treasury securities, to be adjusted quarterly. If it were in effect today, top credit card rates would be 13.8 percent — nearly 5 percentage points below prevailing rates. Proponents hailed Wednesday's subcommittee vote, 5-3 along party lines, as good news for millions of credit card holders. "With the prime rate at 7.5 percent and the Federal Reserve discount rate at 5.5 percent, there is no economic justification for credit card rates of 18, 19 and even 22 percent," said Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the House Consumer Affairs and Coinage Subcommittee. "Clearly it is time for Congress to help bring fairness to the credit card market," Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said.

Deputies may get new injury policy

PROVO, Utah (AP) — The Utah County Commission has been told by a sheriff's deputy association that a plan allowing deputies full compensation for duty-related injuries and disability should be adopted, officials say. Utah County Deputies Association President Jim Tracy said that under current policy, when deputies suffer on-the-job injuries or disabilities, they can take an unpaid leave of absence, take workman's compensation, which is 60 percent of their regular salary or use their vacation or sick leave. "We don't feel those are acceptable options," he said in presenting a rough-draft proposal for a new benefits program at the commission meeting Wednesday. Tracy said the proposal was developed based on a similar policy that is in effect for Salt Lake City deputies. "We should not have to use our sick leave or vacation time as a result of duty-related injuries."

However, Commission chairman Brent Morris said he has some misgivings about approving the new proposed policy. "... We would have to do it countrywide rather than singling out a certain department," he said.

New law may deplete teaching force

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Some 4,000 school employees could take advantage of a new early retirement law to cash in on a one-time benefit package, leaving school districts scrambling to find replacements, state officials fear. The legislation embraces all state and local government employees, but it will have its biggest impact on education. The Utah Retirement Office estimates the law could affect more than 5,000 employees throughout the state — about 4,000 of them in the schools, said Vee J. Sharp, deputy director of Utah State Retirement Systems. The new law allows workers with 25 years service in local and state government to retire this summer and collect full benefits regardless of their age. The previous law required a person to be 65 years old with 30 years of service to receive full retirement benefits. Ogden Superintendent William Garner said most staff members in the district office are older and the new law allows all but one to retire.

Accused murderer draws map to body

ST. GEORGE, Utah (AP) — Authorities on Thursday used a map they said was drawn by Robert William Labrum to find the body of the woman he is accused of slaying, Washington County Sheriff Glenwood Humphries said. Humphries said the body of Becky Jo Jones, 19, was found buried about seven miles northeast of St. George, about 500 feet from U.S. 91, at about 2:30 p.m. "Labrum told us where to look and drew us a map. We went out where he told us and dug and found a body in a sleeping bag," Humphries said. He said the body was being transported to Salt Lake City for an autopsy and positive identification. Labrum, 22, is charged with second-degree murder in the death of Jones, who was last seen in a St. George parking lot on Aug. 13. Labrum is accused of killing the woman, then hiding her body in a steamer trunk in his grandparents' home in Washington, according to court documents.

65 mph not for Utah County

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — While intended to loosen speed limits on rural interstate highways, a bill passed this week in the House of Representatives actually may slow down motorists along Utah's populous Wasatch Front. The issue in the House Wednesday: Whether the states should be allowed to raise the 55 mph speed limit to 65 mph on interstate highways in rural areas, roughly three-quarters of the nation's 43,291 miles of interstate highways. Rep. Jim Hansen, R-Utah, one of sponsors of legislation to increase speed limits on less-traveled interstates to 65 mph, said Thursday that the bill's language could force strict compliance with the 55 mph in populated areas. Under the amendment, a rural interstate is one in an area of fewer than 50,000 population. That excludes Weber, Davis, Salt

Lake and Utah counties, Hansen said. Hansen said the House, in passing the amendment on a 217-206 vote Wednesday, added "intent" language that should force states to stop winking at violations of the 55 mph limit. Gov. Norm Bangerter, who was in Washington earlier this week to lobby for the higher speed limit, said he will ask Utah lawmakers to approve the 65 mph limit. The special session is tentatively scheduled for May. The Legislature passed a similar bill in the general session that ended last month, but Bangerter vetoed it to allow Congress to pass it first. Hansen said Bangerter's speech in a hearing on the amendment was a key factor in the bill's passage. "He gave a very convincing argument," Hansen said. The Surface Transportation Act, to which the bill was amended, was set aside and sent to a senate committee. The highway bill passed by a Senate vote of 79 to 17, despite threats of presidential veto. Republicans planned to amend the speed limit provision by adding it to the massive highway construction bill passed earlier by the Senate but which did not contain the construction contracts in question.

ome not in favor of new fire chief

WANDA RITTENHOUSE
Perse Staff Writer

New fire chief was appointed to Provo City Fire Department at city council meeting Wednesday, but objections from some residents and current members of the department.

Sometimes the most isn't the best, said Venice Dunn, wife of Dick Dunn, a fire department captain, referring to the experience of new fire chief William R. Blair.

There are several members of the department who are as qualified to be fire chief, although their experience might be less extensive. They have spent their entire lives in Provo, have given many years of service," said councilman Stan Brown.

Brown, who was Provo's fire chief for 13 years, said he would favor an established policy of hiring from within "if we have qualified people."

"Rod Jones has been in the department for 18 years, and I feel he has earned the position. He has been serving as acting fire chief, assistant fire chief, and assistant fire marshal for some time, and he has handled all three jobs well. He is certainly qualified for the job," said Captain Dunn.

Mrs. Dunn said the current department members have been hurt and demoralized by the appointment of Blair.

Blair received his initial training in the Los Angeles City Fire Department, where he served from 1953 to 1980.

According to his resume, he progressed in the department through the ranks of captain, battalion chief, and assistant chief, then to the position of deputy chief and bureau commander.

"He then served as fire commissioner and chief of the Chicago Fire Department for three years, and is currently an instructor at the National Fire Academy."

"He wants to get back into the 'line area' of fire fighting, and he wants to move to Provo. We feel there is a time for new blood, new ideas; we can benefit from Blair's tremendous experience," said Mayor Joseph Jenkins.

He stated that a committee of five people, including the current Salt Lake City and Salt Lake County fire chiefs, had interviewed Blair for over an hour before recommending his appointment.

"They gave him a rating of '40,' which was the maximum. Blair is a dynamo, and I think he will ingest energy into the fire department. There has been a morale problem (in the department) for the past five years, and I think Blair's appointment will help with this."

tah Lake development pushed

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Utah Lake is an under-utilized "backyard" that should be developed as a al and recreational resource, said Utah Lake Study Committee Chairman Lavorn Sparks.

A six-member panel recently submitted that recommendation to Utah County after studying the lake's potential for more than a year, but the committee's inclination became apparent even before the report was issued, Sparks said.

Blair said the group was shocked recently when it read a report about Rep. James Hansen's introduction of a bill to create a 43,000-acre waterfowl refuge on lakeshore lands. After reading of the story took about three minutes, Blair said he was on the telephone to Hansen in Washington, D.C., and brought the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service with him.

At a recent Provo meeting Hansen told fish and wildlife officials he was unaware his proposal would bring such attention to Utah County.

"Why do we want to offend the landowners and farmers? I honestly believe it would be a blessing and a gift to those landowners," he said.

Hansen said the people in Brigham City and Farmington would like the waterfowl refuge in that area as the best it they ever had.

Sparks said after committee members explained the lake they had been doing Hansen agreed to hold the bill until the panel completes a master plan study and makes recommendations to the county commission.

Then, fish and wildlife officials have agreed to at least leave the north end of Provo Bay out of the waterfowl refuge, he said.

"We believe there should be a bird refuge at the lake, but we can't turn all of Utah County into a bird refuge just for one segment of society."

After months of work, the committee has presented a comprehensive plan of development for the lake designed to preserve the natural character of the lake shore, improve water quality and develop the lake for the community's benefit.

"We have a wonderful resource here that can be developed if proper planning is done," he said. "Think about this. Within one hour of the lake harbor, a person can be skiing on the slopes, hunting pheasants or deer or enjoying any of the other recreational facilities of this area."

Julie Call, planner with the Utah County Engineer's office, said at one time the 100,000-acre lake was host to 34 resorts, but most of them have closed.

County engineer Clyde Naylor said Utah Lake poses some serious problems for would-be developers. For one thing, the lake is shallow. As a result, the winds keep the silt stirred up, making it appear dirty.

Sewage dumped into the lake for 20 years created profuse plant growth, he added.

Although there are 30,000 boats within a few miles of the lake, boaters don't like the lake because of its shallowness and the plant growth.

Water quality is also a problem. The lake is saline and not of treatable quality for culinary water and almost marginal for irrigation.

Navajos dispute relief distribution

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A relief effort aimed at distributing surplus grain for Navajo Indians is too late for emergency, but a Navajo spokesman says the tribe will receive the 140,000 pounds of flour, beans and seed corn next week.

The group that donated the food says it wants the relief distributed now because it says there are people who need the commodities.

Boxcars carrying the donated material left Oklahoma City early Thursday for Fort Wingate, N.M., where the Navajo Tribal Council will pick it up either Friday or Saturday.

The group could have used the food a month ago, but the donation has cleared up," said David B. Bowman, emergency coordinator for the food distribution program through the Navajo Tribe and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The group is going to store the food at the commodity warehouse in Fort Wingate until the next emergency," he said Thursday from Window Rock, Ariz.

Rick Owsley with the Larry Jones Ministries in Oklahoma City, the group that donated the material, said today he wanted the food items distributed any way. Even if the snow is not over their heads and we cannot get in there with dog sleds, if that is no longer the case, there is still a need," Owsley said. "We want to get it to them."

Blair said the group would send a representative to see how the commodities and seed corn are distributed.

While the provisions are slated only for the Navajo Reservation, Bowman said he has contacted the Hopi Tribe about working with the Hopis in the event of a future emergency.

Oklahoma farmers and the Kerr-McGee Corp. already have shipped more than 300 tons of hay to the Navajos to feed livestock on the reservation in the Four Corners area.

Michael Haney of Tulsa, who organized the relief effort to provide donated food to the Navajos, said his group wouldn't stop the shipments. However, Owsley said the food sent Thursday was the last the ministries would donate for now.

"We'll just ship what we can. Mother nature will always provide another emergency. I'm sure of that," Haney said.

The Crownpoint region of the reservation was hit hard by snow earlier this year. A limited state of emergency was declared because of almost 2 feet of snow in that region. But Bowman said there are no weather-related problems now. It was Bowman's impression that the material was destined for the Crownpoint region, although the Navajos also live in Arizona and Utah.

"We do not have any reports of anybody being stranded," Bowman said.

Haney said his group had been trying to get the food shipped but had trouble raising the money. It was not until Santa Fe Railway donated the railcars that the efforts moved ahead.

Israel insensitive to U.S. Jews

JERUSALEM (AP) — U.S. Jewish leaders say Israel's recruitment of American Jew to spy on the United States shows Israel is insensitive to the relations between the two nations and to the problems of American Jews.

Shlomo Avineri, a former director-general of the Foreign Ministry who teaches political science at Bar Ilan University, says the Americans are simply feeling insecure about their own relation to the Jewish state.

Avineri wrote in the English-language Jerusalem Post that the question of dual loyalty was raised by the fact that Jews themselves "because of the non-Jews, somehow feel, in your heart, that despite all of material success and intellectual achievements, you may not be seen as non-Jews as being truly American."

Jonathan Jay Pollard, a 32-year-old former U.S. Navy intelligence analyst, was sentenced this month to life in prison for selling U.S. military secrets to Israel.

Pollard, a civilian who was hired by a covert Israeli Defense Ministry unit in 1984, said he was motivated by ideological commitment.

His wife, Anne Henderson-Pollard, said she was not involved in the espionage.

Henry Siegman, executive director of the American Jewish Congress, called the Pollard spy scandal a "tragedy in three acts" in an open letter published Wednesday in the Jerusalem Post.

"Were the acts to have been titled, the first would be named 'Stupidity,' the second 'Arrogance' and the third 'Cover-up,'" he wrote. "The way the play is progressing there may yet be a final act, called 'The End of a Beautiful Friendship.'"

Theodore R. Mann, president of the American Jewish Congress, wrote in the Post that Israel should be more sensitive to Jews abroad who may be accused of dual loyalties.

"That Israelis, believing that American Jews are vulnerable to the dual loyalty charge, should nevertheless have proceeded to recruit an American Jew as a spy, ... shows a disdain for American Jewry by Israeli leadership that is profoundly insulting," he said.

"Now that's a big bedroom."

BIG BEDROOMS: With an average size of 10' x 12', our private bedrooms will fit a king-size waterbed with room to spare.

TWO LARGE SPAS: Probably the hottest social spot in the area are our two large jacuzzis, open year-round, and, of course, our huge pool.

FREE SHUTTLE TO CAMPUS: Our van will carry you in climate-controlled comfort right to the Wilkinson Center ten times a day.

THE BOTTOM LINE: Rent for Spring/Summer is $129 per month for a private room, plus utilities. Fall/Winter will be $178 per month, plus utilities.

'Survivor' to rock BYU

By KAELEN MARIE REVERSE
Universe Staff Writer

Survivor was just a name the group decided to go with, yet their name lives on to tell their story of how they survived.

Formed in 1978 by Jim Peterik and Frankie Sullivan, the group had its start in the Chicago rock scene. By 1980 the group had added three others to the two-man band — Stephan Ellis on bass, Marc Droubay on drums and David Bickler with lead vocals.

The band signed with Scotti Brothers Records and released a self-titled debut album. After national tour experience and the release of "Premonition," the band got a big break when Sylvester Stallone asked them to write and record the theme song for "Rocky III."

In 1983, David Bickler left the band and was replaced by Jimi Jamison on lead vocals.

Jamison, from Memphis, Tenn., has enjoyed being with the group, "it has been a good experience being with the band. I have been with them for over three years, but it doesn't seem that long," said Jamison.

Songwriters Jim Peterik and Frankie Sullivan write songs that work on many different levels. We want them to have an immediate appeal, a hook, but we also want them to be meaningful and revealing after three or four listensings," said Peterik.

Recently, the band just began "headlining," (playing as the main attraction group). "We have only been doing this for about a month. We kicked it off by touring in Japan," said Jamison. "We spent 10 days there and performed in five different places. It was really fun because the people received us very well."

"We're just like a bunch of brothers. When we're on the road it becomes really hard being away from our families. We talk bad about each other in a joking way, but nobody else had better be talking bad about us," said Jamison.

With the recent success of the band, Jamison said, "why mess with it. We want the band to continue being successful as long as we can."

Appearing in concert next Thursday at the Marriott Center, Survivor will be doing some of their songs from their latest album, "When Seconds Count," along with songs from previous albums.

"I think this album ("When Seconds Count") is a refinement of our previous work. It presents the best elements of Survivor in strong songs and great sounds. We touch some people, which is really what being a musician is all about. It is that kind of dedication that matters most, 'When Seconds Count,'" said Peterik.

Tickets for the 7:30 p.m. concert are available at the Marriott Center ticket office.

Men's, women's voices to blend in music concert

By VALERIE PUSEY
Universe Staff Writer

A variety of music will be performed from cowboy ballads to classical art songs at the Men's and Women's Chorus concert, tonight.

The 80-member Men's Chorus will sing "Songs of the Old Cowboy," which includes such melodies as "Riders in the Sky," "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain," "Streets of Laredo," "The Old Chisholm Trail," "Colorado Trail" and a hoedown.

The 90-member Women's Chorus, directed by Martha Sargeant, will commence with "Your Voices Raise," from "Chandos" Anthem No. 9 by George Frederic Handel.

The concert will be filled with a variety of music and a variety of accompaniment including piano, organ, string bass, percussion, guitars, harmonica and a cappella arrangements.

The men's chorus will sing "When the Saints Go Marchin' In," a jazz-influenced arrangement, and "Ten Feet Off the Ground," for a barbershop quartet by Richard N. and Richard B. Sherman.

For variety, the contemporary religious works of Heinze Werner Zimmerman and Dale Wood in "Psalm 2" and "Jubilate Deo" will also be performed by the men.

"This is one of the finest men's choruses that I have had the pleasure of working with," said Mack Wilberg, director of the Men's Chorus.

Several soloists will be featured throughout the concert. Selections by Richard Wagner, Franz Schubert, Wilber Chenoweth and Randall Thompson will also be featured.

The Women's chorus will be singing "Messe Basse" by Gabriel Faure and "Choral Hymns From the Rig Veda," set three by Gustav Holst.

Songs by Heinrich Shutz and Johannes Brahms will also be performed.

"It's a varied program with something for everyone," said Wilberg.

The concert is scheduled tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC.

Tickets are on sale at the BYU Music ticket office.

Right off the press!

No lie. Well, it will have to be a prediction. On Wednesday, March 25, you will read stories and news about 2007--as students think it might be--because Wednesday, March 25, is when the Heritage Edition will be published by The Daily Universe.

In this special edition, you will read what BYU could be like when your kids are students here. Will students still charge to the Cougar eat at noon? Will men be able to go sockless?

Not only will the Heritage Edition try to predict the year 2007, but it will bring back 1967 and highlight 1987.

For a look at the past, present and future of Brigham Young University, pick up the Heritage Edition on Wednesday, March 25. You'll want to keep it until 2007 to check the predictions!

Songwriters to debut songs

By LEANN L. FREDRICKSON
Universe Staff Writer

Songwriters Showcase gives student composers the opportunity to perform their original music Friday evening.

All 20 of the performers come from a songwriting class offered by the BYU Music Department. The class is taught by Ron Simpson, director of the Lamanite Generation.

Simpson said the class is designed with a two fold purpose: to teach the craft of songwriting and to introduce the students to the realities of the music industry.

According to Simpson, Songwriters Showcase is a realistic simulation of the type of situation students will experience when trying to sell their music to publishers.

"By simulating exact publishing situations that would occur in Los Angeles, Nashville and New York, we are trying to insulate them against going out into the industry and getting their noses bloodied," said Simpson.

The students have studied the craft of songwriting all semester. According to Simpson, the students are taught basic music theory, and the art of recognizing and creating good lyrics. The songs are written specifically for the popular music industry.

Simpson said the students are not prescreened on the basis of talent. "I'm so confident in the concepts I've passed on that I think everyone in the class has respectable craft abilities."

"The songwriting class has exposed me to a lot of things I never thought of before," said Erik Felsted a freshman from Baltimore, Md., majoring in Business.

"I never realized there was a form to writing songs."

'Y' farm to host sale; ranchers bid for bulls

By JOHN HUBBARD
Universe Staff Writer

Ranchers from all parts of Utah will come to BYU's Ellsworth Meat and Livestock Center tomorrow at 1 p.m. for the 11th annual Test Station Bull Sale.

More than 40 bulls of various breeds will be auctioned off by the Animal Sciences Department for breeding purposes, according to BYU beef herdsman Brian Boden.

"We sell these top quality bulls every year to help intermountain ranchers improve their herds," said Boden. "The BYU Test Station gains from the experience by using the process as a tool in teaching."

Boden runs the test station from the BYU Farm in Spanish Fork. The bulls on sale tomorrow were sent to him last fall from Idaho, Wyoming, New Mexico, Oregon and Utah.

The test station had the animals on an intensive growth program for 112 days prior to the sale.

"We don't sell them at auction if the rate of growth is too slow or if there are fertility problems," said Boden. "This year only 45 of the 60 bulls that were sent to us are going to be sold."

He added that each bull is compared with the expectations of its own breed.

BYU's Test Station produced the top Angus on test in Utah this year. Boden said it gained more about 5.5 pounds per day over the 112-day test period. It came off the March 1 test weighing 1,307 pounds.

"Bull costs averaged $1,250 last year," said Boden. "The top selling bull last year sold for $2,500."

BYU Information Science director named to head Utah Library Assoc.

By BRENDA MONEY
Universe Staff Writer

The director of the School of Library and Information Sciences at BYU, Nathan M. Smith, will be appointed president of the Utah Library Association next week at the association's annual meeting in Salt Lake City.

Smith is also the advisor for the BYU student chapter of ALA/GRADALIS (American Library Association/Graduate Students in Library Sciences). The club was recently honored by being accepted as the tenth student chapter to be admitted to the ALA.

According to Sherie Baldrige, ALA is a prestigious organization which offers many services to its members, including members of stu-

Honors scholars conference centers on student ideas

By MARILEE SCHOLL
Universe Staff Writer

Students and faculty can learn about a variety of student ideas at the Student Scholars Conference sponsored by the BYU Honors Department Friday.

"We've invited any student to prepare a paper on any topic they choose for presentation to interested students and faculty," said Dean of Honors, James Kearl.

He said the purpose of this conference is to allow students to share their ideas and to let others know what types of things students are thinking about.

Titles for the presentations include the following: "Romantic Rottenness and True Ripeness: A look at the Romantic Lear," "Conditions in Cambodia Since 1979" and "Reasons for Male Aggression."

Each student will make a 15 to 20 minute presentation and will respond to comments and questions. Handouts and copies of their papers will be available for people who want them.

This conference has been divided into three sessions, a morning session and two afternoon sessions.

The morning session runs from 9 to 11 a.m. and will have presentations about the the Soviet Union and Southeast Asia, economics in Canada and English and foreign literature.

The first afternoon session runs from 12 to 2 p.m. and will discuss essays on film, applications of science — ancient and modern, and life and research at BYU.

The second afternoon session runs from 2 to 4 p.m. and will cover topics involving physical and social sciences, economics of North and South America and illusions and reality.

"We hope this (Student Scholars Conference) will become a regular part of the university community," said Kearl.

Remodeled cafeteria opens; students to select new name

By DONALD W. MEYERS
Universe Staff Writer

The north cafeteria of the George Q. Morris Center, devastated by fire five months ago, was the site of a ribbon-cutting ceremony marking its reopening for student use Wednesday.

"The fact that we have such a happy ending to what was a significant matter to the University and to enjoy the safety of the staff and the students makes this, in a personal way, a much happier occasion than a ribbon-cutting on a new facility," said BYU President Jeffrey Holland, at the ceremony prior to the opening of the remodeled cafeteria.

The cafeteria was gutted in an early morning fire on October 3 caused by a short circuiting appliance. Since that time, the facility went through a major remodeling and Deseret Towers residents were forced to crowd into the south cafeteria for their meals.

"I thank everyone for past patience exercised under these circumstances," Holland said. "It has not been a convenient thing, it hasn't been easy for anyone, but there has been a minimum of muttering."

Also in attendance were Executive Vice-President John Stohlton and representatives from Deseret Towers management and Food Services. After Holland cut the ribbon, the students were invited to inspect the facilities and dine on steak and baked potato, prepared for the occasion.

"What they have done is a remarkable job of remodeling," Ron Schouten, manager of the Morris Center Cafeteria said in describing the work done on the facility. The remodeling included skylights, new carpeting, glass partitions on the serving line and potted trees in the dining area. "I feel like it is the finest in the area," Schouten said.

The facility is not yet ready for serving food, which is being handled by the south cafeteria. According to Food Services, the cafeteria will be serving food in several weeks.

The opening ceremonies also kicked off a contest for Deseret Towers residents to name the room. The winning name will be incorporated into a neon sign and the winner will receive $100 and dinner for two at the Skyroom.

Some of the residents were impressed with the atmosphere, but wondered if the food would match. "The place looks terrific and everything's great, but tomorrow we go back to the Morris Center special — bad food," said Margaret Morris, a senior from Toppenish, Wash. majoring in elementary education.

Preston Clegg, a freshman from Burley, Idaho majoring in chemistry said the Food Services people served the steak "just for the administration, because the food here is not normally this good."

"I think it would be great if they could only keep the food as good as it is now," said Sam Lee, a senior from San Jose, Calif. majoring in Anthropology.

Todd Lines, a junior from Ogden, majoring in physics said "it was fun, it was nice and it was good to see all the dignitaries, but I'll hate to eat the food for the next three weeks."

Secretive group exposes homosexuals

CHICAGO (AP) — A secretive group that ran a personal ad appealing to homosexuals may not have violated any laws by revealing the respondents' sexual preferences to landlords and employers and warning against AIDS, a postal official says.

The "Great White Brotherhood of the Iron Fist," whose members have not been identified, has claimed responsibility for the Jan. 23 and Jan. 30 ads in the Reader, a weekly newspaper, officials say.

At least 12 men have been targets of the mailings, which have included letters saying the individual may be a carrier of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, said Jonathan Katz, a spokesman for the Gay and Lesbian Alliance at the University of Chicago.

The mailings, to neighbors, landlords and employers, included photocopies of the responses along with letters warning recipients to "avoid this homosexual at all costs," according to the Chicago Tribune.

The newspaper received a mailing from the group saying its efforts "would not stop until we have achieved the complete ruination of homosexuality."

Mark R. Grey, inspector in charge in the field division of the U.S. Postal Inspection Service, said Wednesday authorities planned to examine the letters and turn the matter over to the U.S. attorney's office if any laws have been violated.

Katz said the group appears to be operating out of the Hyde Park neighborhood, which virtually surrounds the university campus.
